Bargaining unit faculty members are expected to devote their full attention and talents to the University during their appointment period. Bargaining unit faculty members may engage in external activities, including employment, consultation or contracting with other entities, provided that such external services in no way interfere with the performance of the bargaining unit faculty member's University duties. Bargaining unit faculty members engaging in outside employment and other activities must comply with all Ohio Ethics laws and University policies regarding conflicts of interest and commitment [i.e., Ethics and External Services policy]. Bargaining unit faculty members will submit a Request to Perform External Services form where required by University policy. Permission for such outside activities may be withheld or withdrawn by the University if the University determines that such outside activities conflict with established University policies, interfere with a bargaining unit faculty member's University duties, or if a conflict with the Ohio Ethics Laws is identified.
