Before You Begin.....What Matters Most?

The care and support arrangement affects everybody's life — persons with care needs and caregivers alike. Before you begin, take a moment to reflect on what matters most to you, in your own life, on a daily basis. Keep this in mind while you and your family discuss your unique care and support arrangement.

WHAT MATTERS MOST to you about how you spend your time and with whom? What's important to you about the flow of your day? What are you most eager to preserve as life goes on?

For example, some people might say:

- I'm an early riser. I do yard work/chores in the morning.
- I have an exercise routine that is important to me.
- Spending time with my grandchildren makes my day and it helps their parents.
- I need downtime to unwind before bed.
- Going to work and earning a paycheck. My job is important to me.
- I need some alone time.
- I want to get out to see my friends.

Use this space to describe.

WHAT'S NEEDED?

This first section is designed to help you think about what is needed in your family's care and support arrangement. To do this, you'll complete several tools with questions about:

Underlying Health Considerations that limit your Parent/Partner/Person With Care Needs' (PWCN's) ability to carry out daily self-care activities

Environmental Considerations related to the home in which your PWCN currently lives

What help is required by your PWCN and who's helping now

When you are providing care and support

How the current care and support arrangement affects you

Underlying Health Considerations

This tool helps you and your family think and talk about underlying health conditions that limit your PWCN’s ability to carry out daily self-care activities. By keeping these in mind, you’ll be better able to talk about which limitations might be improved and which need to be considered when making decisions about care. Check the column that best describes your PWCN’s current health situation. If you are not sure whether your PWCN experiences limitations in a certain area, check the “I’m not sure” column.

How do limitations in the following areas affect your PWCN’s ability to carry out daily living and self-care activities?

Health Consideration	I’m not sure	No limitation	Some limitation	Major limitation
Hearing
Vision
Taste/Smell
Dental health
Bladder or bowel control
Hand dexterity
Physical mobility
Balance

Decision-making/judgement
Depression
Anxiety
Substance use disorder/addiction
Other physical or mental health considerations. Please describe.

Environmental Considerations

This tool helps you and your family think about your PWCN’s current living environment. If you generally agree with the category, check the “yes” column. If you generally disagree with the category, check the “no” column. If you’re not sure, check “not sure.” If the category is not applicable (for example, there are no stairs), check N/A.

What Care and Support is Required and Who is Helping Now?

This tool helps you and your family members think about what care and support is required and who is helping now.

For the “what personal help is required” section, identify the amount of personal help required by your PWCN by checking a box for each care or support activity. By “personal help,” we mean help your PWCN requires from another person.

For the “who is helping now” section, identify who is assisting your PWCN with the activity. Don’t forget to include yourself, if applicable!

For the “what devices are used and needed” section, indicate what kinds of equipment or devices (like a wheelchair, walker, a lift, adjustable bed, or special tools) are used and what kinds of equipment or devices could be helpful

If the activity does not apply to your PWCN, check “not applicable” (N/A). (For example, if no medical or nursing tasks are needed, or if there are no pets, these are not applicable.)

If you are not sure about what help is required, who is helping, or what devices are used or could be helpful, check the “I’m not sure” box in each of those sections.

When are YOU Providing Care and Support?

In every family, caregivers provide different types and amounts of care and support-- and at different times. This tool will help you and your family members think and talk about when you are currently providing care and support to your PWCN.

If you are currently providing care or support occasionally, in the space below describe the care or support you provide and when you provide it. Examples include phone check-ins, breaks for the primary caregiver, paperwork assistance, or communication with health and service providers, etc.

If you currently provide care or support on a daily or weekly basis, shade in the times you generally provide help.

How Does the Current Care and Support Arrangement Affect You?

This tool helps you and your family think and talk about the impact the care and support arrangement has on each other so you'll be able to keep this in mind as you make decisions about care and support.

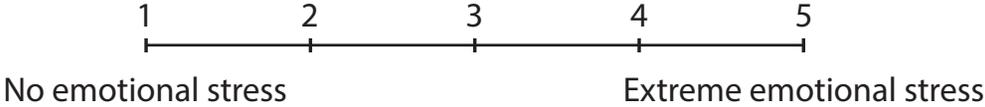

For each area, circle the number from 1 to 5 that best reflects how much you think the care and support arrangement affects you overall in that area, then use the box below each rating to give examples of what influenced your rating.

What are those physical strains?

Overall emotional stress

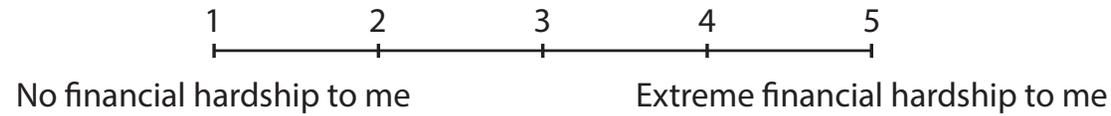

What are those emotional stresses?

Benefits

We know that family care can create some stresses and strains, but families also report experiencing benefits from the care and support arrangement. These include physical, emotional, social, and financial benefits. Use the space below to identify any benefits of the care and support arrangement you may be experiencing.

Strengths

Each person — the PWCN and the caregivers alike — brings a different set of strengths to the care and support arrangement. What are the strengths you bring or have the potential to bring to your family’s care and support arrangement? (Examples include: patience, sense of humor, knowledge about illness/disability, particular caregiving skills, financial resources, etc.) Name your own strengths here.

WHAT'S WANTED?

Now that you have thought about what's needed and what's happening, it's important to think about what is wanted when it comes to the care and support arrangement. You can think about what's wanted in two ways:

What is your ultimate goal for the care and support arrangement?

What changes do you want in the care and support arrangement?

When you complete these tools it's important to be as specific as you can.
The more specific you are, the easier it will be for others to understand what you want.

What is your ultimate goal for the care and support arrangement?

Before you can start to think about what's possible in your family's care and support arrangement, it helps to have a clear vision of what you want to happen as a result of your arrangement. Often, family members have different ideas about what they want to happen, so before you meet with your family, take some time to think about your goal for the care and support arrangement and write it here:

My ultimate goal for our family's care and support arrangement is:

During your family meeting, you and your family members will work together to create a shared goal statement(s) for your family.

What changes do you want in the care and support arrangement?

Now that you have determined what you want, think about what needs to change in the care and support arrangement in order for that to happen.

Below, list 3 changes that could be made (by you, your PWCN, or the other caregivers) to help achieve your ultimate goal. Be realistic. It may help you to think of the 3 simplest or easiest changes that could be made to bring you closer to your goal.
